Experimental Courses: Spring 2019

ANTH 310. Food, Farms, and Culture. This course is an exploration of the farming systems, consumption practices, and cultural patterns that intertwine in the United States. We ask what it means to seek the Kingdom of God throughout food production and consumption in the United States, seeking environmental justice; racial, ethnic, and class equity in food access and production; equity in urban and rural places; well-being for workers; health for human bodies; and the joys of communing around food.

ANTH 320. Bollywood (Indian Cinema): A Window into Indian Society. This course explores images of Indian society that emerge through the medium of film. We will learn about gender inequalities, social injustice, poverty, oppression, violation of human rights, unavailability of basic needs, and inaccessibility to education in Indian society. Throughout this course, our aim will be to recognize the roots of issues in Indian society and consider how we as Christians and individuals can respond to them.

ART 220. Woodblock Printing. This course introduces basic woodblock carving and relief printing processes with two main objectives: 1) woodblock printing lends itself towards intriguing and complex color investigations, and 2) printmaking has a long history of social and political engagement. This class will deepen student awareness of global perspectives in printmaking. (3 cr.)

ART 300. Landscape and Photography. A studio art course considering our local landscape, its long history, current challenges, and historical and contemporary practices in photography. Cameras and equipment available for checkout.

C E 360. Classics of Christian Devotion. This course traces some of the dominant themes of Christian spirituality. Through biblical, theological, and historical study we will examine how various individuals and movements have experienced and sought to nurture their relationship with the Triune God. Additionally, we will explore the importance of who “writes” history and the resulting impact upon the development of our study of it. Particular attention is paid to the skills of discernment for reading primary sources.

EVAN 560. Preaching/Teaching in and to Culture. This course is a study in methods, means and rationale of biblical interpretation and contextual preaching. The course will introduce students to various tools for exegeting the Bible and the audience toward the formation of culturally relevant yet biblically based sermons and lessons.

EVAN 570. Theology of Religions: Engaging Religious Diversity. The theology of religions in a field of study which attempts to account theologically for the reality of non-Christian religious traditions and religious diversity. This introductory course in the theology of religions will help students begin formulating a more informed biblical, theological, and phenomenological assessment of other religions. This includes an examination of some of the world’s major religions (e.g. Islam, Buddhism, Hinduism) from a Christian perspective with an emphasis on past and present missiological theories and practices for engaging constructively with adherents of these religions.

SCI 290. Health Professions Colloquium. This course provides a variety of topical discussions on issues relevant to work in the healthcare profession today. Dialogue and reflection upon the impact of the Christian faith and issues of medical ethics and care of various patient populations included. Discussions and assignments will prepare students for application to health profession programs. Pre-requisite: Junior or senior standing. (1 cr.)

SPAN 310. Culture and Grammar Review. This course provides an intensive review of grammar structures studied at the Intermediate level, along with authentic cultural and literary reading selections and films related to the contemporary Spanish speaking world. The purpose is to solidify what has been learned previously and to equip students to engage with other content based courses at the upper division level. This course is open to any students above the 201 level who wish to continue their studies in Spanish. This course may count as an elective towards the Spanish major/minor requirements.

SOC 450. Males, Masculinity, and Violence. Senseless male violence can burst forth anywhere, anytime. It is often exacerbated by distorted, bogus, or hateful notions of masculinity. Why does his horrendous male violence occur? What can be done about it? Where can engaged churches bring healing to offenders and victims? This course probes the social scientific solutions to violent masculinity recognizing the spiritual or theological insights endemic to Christian faith.
